Hello Poetry

When I am an old woman I shall wear purple With a red hat that doesn't go, and doesn't suit me, And I shall spend my pension on brandy and summer gloves And satin sandals, and say we've no money for butter. I shall sit down on the pavement

I know you. Sometimes you say things, expecting that I won't understand, and I think it's strange because I know you. That's what this is. I know you, And I want you, And I care about you Anyway. Don't want no one else. You might not know me, The stanchions you use to prop yourself up eating all that I have fed you, In the darkness, In

You Are My Soulmate, What My Heart Wants To Say, I Love

If I could tell you I would let you know. If we should weep when clowns put on their show, If we should stumble when musicians play, Time will say nothing but I told you so. And I think that what I am going to say will do you good: for I have something more to say, at which you may be inclined to cry out; but I beg that you will not do this. I would have you know that, if you kill such a one as I am, you will injure yourselves more than you will injure me.

Poetry is a lot of things to a lot of people. Homer's epic, "The Odyssey," described the wanderings of the adventurer, Odysseus, and has been called the greatest story ever told.
