For a simple model with no bells and whistles, you could probably get by spending less than $100. On the other hand, if you want a top-of-the-line infrared heater that doubles as an air purifier and humidifier, you should expect to pay at least $150. A dependable mid-range model will run between about $100 and $150. These may not have all of

Sierra-based model []. In late-1987, for the 1988 model year, the P100 was re-bodied with a new Ford Sierra-based cab. Engine choices were originally the Sierra's 2.0 litre "Pinto" carburetted petrol engine, with a 1.8 L turbo-diesel following soon thereafter. The range was now built in Portugal for the European market, to a design set out by Ford UK. . It proved a strong seller, particularly
